Alibis Essays On Elsewhere Andre

"Now and then . . . we are offered a reading experience that reminds us of the gold standard in literature, and one such book is Alibis: Essays on Elsewhere by André Aciman . . . he shares with Proust an ability to plumb the depths of memory and meaning in the observed details of ordinary life . . . Aciman resolves the contradictions that he embodies—'This feeling of being cut off from oneself or of being in two places at the same time'—with a simple credo: 'Art is nothing more ...

Not surprisingly, André Aciman, a well-known author, and a specialist in the works of Proust, has had similar experiences, experiences he describes in his essay "Lavender." "Lavender" is the opening essay in his collection Alibis: Essays on Elsewhere. Aciman's madeleine cake is the smell of his father's lavender shaving lotion, remembered from childhood.

Alibis: Essays on Elsewhere by André Aciman

André Aciman could be seen as a masochistic writer. He constantly revisits scenes of distress and delight in order to spark his writing. In Alibis, his latest collection of essays, he confronts this central springboard of his work. I write about exile, remembrance, and the passage of time.

Alibis: Essays on Elsewhere - Kindle edition by Aciman ...

"Maddening though this habit of searching for displaced selves might be in a traveling companion—the word 'alibi' literally means 'elsewhere'—it is a pleasure in an essayist. While the roll call of places visited by Mr. Aciman is unexceptional, his angle on them is anything but, since his weakness for traveling 'in search of lost time' opens up telescoping possibilities of reverie and speculation.
